

THE VAULT

The Private Concierge CV

A one-page structure, and the discipline behind it

THE PRIVATE CONCIERGE ACADEMY

Maison Amarine · Confidential · For the use of our mentees only

Why one page, and never two

The people who read this document are not recruiters in the ordinary sense. They are a principal, a family office, or a consultant who has read four hundred of these. They will give yours between forty and ninety seconds. Everything that matters must be visible in that time, and nothing else should be there at all.

A private CV is not a career history. It is a demonstration of judgement: what you chose to keep, and what you had the confidence to leave out. Restraint is the first quality they are looking for, and your CV is the first place they will find it, or fail to.

The three rules

No names, ever. Never write the name of a family, a principal, a residence or a yacht. Write “a UHNW family (Europe / US)”, “a private household of eight staff”, “a principal with four residences”. A CV that names a former employer will be discarded by anyone serious, and rightly so.

Scope, not tasks. Not “managed calendars”. Instead: “ran the personal affairs of a family across three residences, coordinating twenty vendors and a household budget of €400k.” Numbers are your only permitted boast.

No photograph, no colour, no design. Cream, black, one thin rule. Anything decorative reads as insecurity. The document should feel like a calling card, not a portfolio.

The structure

Header. Your name. One line beneath it: the role you are for, not the role you had. “Private Concierge & Lifestyle Manager”. Then: city, mobility, languages, licences. Nothing else. No address, no date of birth, no marital status.

The line. One sentence, italic, beneath the header. It is the only place you are permitted to speak of yourself. Example: “Eight years in the private service of affluent households and luxury hospitality, trusted with residences, journeys and the discretion they require.”

Experience. Reverse chronological. For each: the kind of household or house (never the name), your title, the dates, then three lines maximum. Each line begins with a verb and ends with a consequence.

Craft. A short block: household operations, vendor management, budgets, travel and private aviation, event coordination, staff rotas, security liaison, discretion protocols. Only what you can defend in an interview.

Languages & mobility. Stated plainly, with levels. Mobility is not a detail in this world, it is a qualification. If you are willing to relocate, say so here.

References. “Available upon request, subject to the consent of the household.” That sentence alone tells them you understand.

The model

Read it, then rebuild it with your own life. Keep the shape, keep the restraint.

CLAIRE DUVAL

PRIVATE CONCIERGE & LIFESTYLE MANAGER

Geneva · Fully mobile, EU & CH · French (native), English (fluent), Italian (working) · Clean driving licence

Eight years in private service and luxury hospitality, trusted with residences, journeys and the discretion they require.

EXPERIENCE

Private Concierge, UHNW family, four residences (CH / FR / UK) · 2022 to present

Ran the family's personal affairs across four residences: vendors, budgets, maintenance, provisions. Coordinated 20+ suppliers and a household budget of €400k, reported monthly without being asked. Managed a relocation and a full renovation, delivered without a single day of disruption to the family.

Guest Relations Manager, private chalet & villa operator, Alps & Riviera · 2019 to 2022

Welcomed and orchestrated the stays of affluent families and their guests, from arrival to departure. Built and held a black book of chefs, drivers, florists, guides and restaurants across two regions. Trained four seasonal staff in the codes and the standard of the house.

Concierge, five-star palace hotel, Paris · 2017 to 2019

The impossible request, daily: tables, access, sourcing, timing, and the discretion that surrounds them.

CRAFT

Household operations · Vendor & contractor management · Household budgets & reporting · Private aviation and travel logistics · Relocations & renovations · Event coordination · Staff rotas · Security liaison · Discretion & NDA protocols

REFERENCES

What disqualifies a CV, quietly

None of these will be mentioned to you. All of them are noticed.

- The name of a former principal, a family, or a residence. This is the fastest possible rejection, and it is final.
- A photograph. In private service it reads as a misunderstanding of what is being hired.
- Superlatives. “Passionate”, “dynamic”, “detail-oriented”. Say what you did, and let them conclude.
- Two pages, or a career history that begins at your student job. Everything before the last decade is one line, or nothing.
- A personal email address that is not your name. It costs nothing to correct, and it is noticed.
- Any mention of salary, or of what you are looking for. That conversation belongs to the third meeting, not the first page.

One last discipline

Read your CV aloud before you send it. If a single line sounds as though you are selling yourself, remove it. In this world one does not sell. One is chosen.
