HOW TO STUDY THIS MODULE

This is the practice and the deliverable together, because in this final week they are the same thing.

Five pages. You will open page one on the night before your first day in a house, whenever that day comes, and it may be in three weeks or in a year.

Write it as though Monday were the day.

CHAPTER I

What you are producing

Five pages, and one of them is uncomfortable

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Understand what the entry plan is for.

Every other document in this programme prepared you to be hired. This one is the first that assumes you already are.

It is written now, in the calm, precisely because you cannot write it in the first week of a new house, when you will be exhausted, overstimulated, and entirely certain that you are failing.

You are writing instructions to a version of yourself who will be too tired to think. Write them accordingly: short, specific, and unsentimental.

CHAPTER II

*Before day oneLEARNING OBJECTIVES

Prepare the arrival.

Section	What you write
What I bring	The toolkit, listed. Brief sheet, observation log, vendor card, expense log, escalation card, and your code of conduct. Blank, printed, and in the bag.
What I read the night before	Your code of conduct from Week 3, and Chapter I of the Week 8 note. Write it down. You will not remember on the night, and that is exactly the night it matters.
The geography	The routes, the hospital, the pharmacy, the airport at eight in the morning and not at three in the afternoon. Done before you arrive, not discovered afterwards.
What I will not do	Written explicitly: I will not research the family. Not their business, not their photographs, not their children. Write the sentence, because the temptation is real and it will feel like diligence.
My own life, settled	Where I live, how I get there, what I do on my day off. A person managing their own chaos cannot absorb anybody else's.

CHAPTER III

Days one to fourteen

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Plan a fortnight of learning and no improving.

Commitment

How you write it

The names	Every person, written down on day one, learned that evening, used the next morning. Write this as a command, with the words "on day one" in it.
The log	Ten minutes, every night, six categories, facts only, for fourteen nights without exception. Name the hour. Name where the notebook lives.
The list I do not act on	Everything I can see is wrong. Written down. Untouched. Give it a name and a place, and write, underneath, the sentence: everything that looks stupid has a history.
The questions I ask	Thresholds. Escalation. Who I coordinate with. What is expected of me by whom. Ask them in the first week, plainly, once. And the money question from Week 5, in the exact words you will use.
The unglamorous thing	Name it in advance if you can. If you cannot, write the rule: within the first week I will take one task nobody wants, without being asked, and I will not mention it.

CHAPTER IV

Page three

Days fifteen to forty-five

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Plan the first change and the first mistake.

CommitmentHow you write it

My first change	The criteria, not the change itself, because you cannot know it yet. Small, invisible, removes friction from the principal and not from me, and it is never announced.
My three sentences	Written out, in full, now. Fact. Fix. Ownership. You are composing them in July precisely so that you do not have to compose them on day thirty-one, in a corridor, with your heart going.
The forty minutes	Write this sentence: when I make a mistake, I will not take forty minutes. I will take four. Read the case in the Week 8 note if you need to know why this line is here.
The housekeeper	Name what you will do. Ask her opinion, genuinely, in the first fortnight, about something that matters, and take it.
My days off	Written down, and defended. The martyr is on the list of seven failures, and she believed she was the most loyal person in the house.

CHAPTER V

Days forty-six to ninety

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Plan the manual and the review.

Commitment	How you write it
The manual	The contents page, written now. The house, the people, the standards, the rhythms, the emergencies. Nobody will ask you for it. Write, underneath, why you will do it anyway.
The review	A date. Ninety days after any start date. And the three questions, written out: what is working, what would you like done differently, and is there anything I have not noticed.
What I do while they answer	Write it: I write down every word, I defend nothing, I say thank you, I change it, and I never mention it again. Write it now, because in the room you will want to explain yourself, and explaining is losing.
The week-six crash	Put a note in your own diary, dated for your sixth week, that says: this is the crash, it is universal, it passes at week ten, do not resign. You will need to have written it, because on that day you will not believe anyone else.

CHAPTER VI

My failure mode

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Name, in writing, the way you will fail.

The seven failures are in Chapter IX of Module 1. Reformer. Comparer. Impressed. Confidante. Invisible. Martyr. The one who hid a mistake.

One of them is yours. You know which. It is not the one you find least admirable. It is the one you would actually commit, and you have probably committed a version of it before, in a smaller world.

PAGE FIVE, AND IT IS ONE PARAGRAPH

Name it. Describe how it would look in your first ninety days, specifically, in a real house, on a real Tuesday.

Then write the one sentence that would stop it, and write it as an instruction to yourself, not as an aspiration.

This is the last page you will write in this programme, and in five years it may be the only one you still remember writing.

CHAPTER VII

The scenarios

Ten days from a real first ninety

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Apply everything, one final time.

Two or three sentences each. What you do, what you say, and what you deliberately do not do.

1 • Day 2

The housekeeper tells you, warmly and unprompted, that the last house manager was "a disaster, honestly, you would not believe it", and pauses.

2 • Day 4

You discover that the household is paying roughly forty per cent above market for its window cleaning, to a company owned by the driver's brother-in-law.

3 • Day 9

The principal asks you, in passing, how you are finding the housekeeper.

4 • Day 12

A supplier you have never met telephones and says he always deals directly with the principal, and would rather not go through you.

5 · Day 18

You realise, from the calendar, that the family are away next week and that nobody has told you. You have not been told because nobody thought of it, or because you are not yet trusted with movement information. You do not know which.

6 · Day 26

It is Sunday, your day off, and a message arrives asking for something small that could easily wait until Monday.

7 · Day 31

Your first real mistake. It has cost about eight hundred euros and nobody has noticed.

8 · Day 40

The principal is sharp with you, in front of two other members of staff, about something that was not your fault and that you can prove was not your fault.

9 · Day 58

The principal's wife, at the end of a long day, tells you something about her marriage that she should not have told you.

10 • Day 88

You have written the manual. Nobody asked for it. Nobody knows you have done it. What do you do with it?

The debrief for these ten is your graduation session. Bring your written answers. We will go through them together, and I will be honest with you, and it will be the most useful hour of the eight weeks.

CHAPTER VIII

Marking scheme

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Know how the final deliverable is assessed.

Criterion	What earns it
Instructions, not intentions	Every line executable by a tired person. "I will observe carefully" is worth nothing. "22:00, six categories, black notebook, fourteen nights" is worth something.
The three sentences	Written out in full. If they are not, you have not understood why they must be written in the calm.
The review, dated	A date, and the three questions, and what you do while they answer.
Page five	Honest. If you have named a flattering failure mode, I will say so, kindly, and we will find the real one together.
The ten scenarios	Answered before the session, in writing. Scenarios 1, 3, 6, 8 and 9 are the ones I will spend the hour on.

HOW TO SUBMIT, AND HOW TO BOOK YOUR SESSION

- 1. Submit. Everything you produced this week goes into the Submit area of Module 4, inside your student portal. One PDF. Not by email, and not in the chat.
- 2. Book. The moment your work is uploaded, a Book your session button appears in that same place. Click it and choose your slot with me. Do it straight away, while you are there, because the slots for each week are limited and they are taken in the order they are booked.
- 3. Leave me time. Book your session for at least two days after your submission, so that I can read your work properly beforehand. That way the session is spent on the correction rather than on the reading, and you get every minute of it.

The ten scenarios are submitted with your entry plan, in a single PDF.
